Diamond Spectacles.

THESE SPECTACLES are manufactured from "MINUTE CRYSTAL PEBBLES" melted together, and are called Diamond on account of their hardness and brilliancy. It is well known that spectacles cut from Brazilian or Scotch pebbles are very injurious to the eye, because of their polarizing light. Having been tested with the polariscope, the diamond lenses have been found to admit fifteen per cent. less heated rays than any other pebble. They are ground with great scientific accuracy, are free from chromatic abberrations, and produces a brightness and distinctness of vision not before attained in spectacles.
Manufactured by the Spencer Optical Manufacturing Company, New York. For sale by responsible agents in every city in the Union. H. A. MONDAY, MARCH, 30, 1874.

THE STORY OF THE GUN.

FROM VICTOR HUGO'S "NINETY-THREE."

[The war vessel Claymore, coming from Jersey for the French coast in the service of the Royalists, carried a mysterious passenger, whose name was known only to the captain and his chief officer, but who afterwards appears as the Marquis de Lantenac, the royalist leader in La Vendee. The breaking loose of a carronade in the gun-deck interrupts a conversation between these three men, and the description of the scene of destruction that followed forms one of the most powerful episodes of the novel.]

A gun that breaks its moorings becomes suddenly some indescribable supernatural beast. It is a machine which transforms itself into a monster. This mass turns upon its wheels, has the rapid movements of a billiard ball, rolls with the rolling, pitches with the pitching; goes, comes, pauses to meditate; resumes its course, rushes along the ship from end to end like an arrow, circles about; springs aside, evades, runs, breaks, kills, exterminates. It is a battering ram which assaults a wall at its own caprice. Moreover, the battering ram is metal, the wall wood.

In an instant the whole crew were on foot. The fault was the chief gunner's: he had neglected to fix home the screw nut of the mooring chain, and had so badly shackled the four wheels of the carronade that the play given to the axle and frame had separated the platform, and ended by breaking the breeching. The cordage had broken, so that the gun was no longer secure on the carriage. The stationery breeching which prevents recoil was not in use at that period. As a heavy wave struck the port, the carronade, weakly attached, recoiled, burst its chain, and began to rush wildly about. Conceive, in order to have an idea of this strange sliding, a drop of water running down a pane of glass.

At the moment when the lashings gave way the gunners were in the battery, some in groups, others standing alone occupied with such duties as sailors perform in expectation of the command to clear for action. The carronade, hurled forward by the pitching, dashed into this knot of men, and crushed four at the first blow; then, flung back and shot over by the rolling, it cut in two a fifth poor fellow, glanced off to the larboard side, and struck a piece of the battery with such force as to unship it. Then rose the cry of distress which had been heard. The men rushed toward the ladder—the gun deck emptied in the twinkling of an eye. The enormous cannon was left alone. She was given up to herself. She was her own mistress, and mistress of the vessel. She could do what she willed with both. This whole crew, accustomed to laugh in battle, trembled now. To describe the universal terror would be impossible.

Captain Boisberthelot and Lieutenant Vieuville, although both intrepid men, stopped at the head of the stairs, and remained mute, pale, hesitating, looking down on the deck. Some one pushed them aside with his elbow and descended. It was their passenger, the peasant, the man of whom they had been speaking a moment before.

When he reached the foot of the ladder he stood still.

The captain promptly recovered his composure, and at his order the sailors threw down into the deck everything which could deaden and check the mad rush of the gun —mattresses, hammocks, spare sails, coils of rope, extra equipments, and the bales of false assignats, of which the corvette carried a whole cargo: an infamous deception, which the English considered a fair trick in war.

But what could these rags avail? No one dared to descend to arrange them in any useful fashion, and in a few instants they were mere heaps of lint.

The old passenger who had descended to the gun-deck, looked like a form of stone stationed at the foot of the stairs. He stood motionless, gazing sternly about upon the devastation. Indeed, it seemed impossible to take a single step forward.

Each bound of the liberated carronade menaced the destruction of the vessel. A few minutes more and shipwreck would be inevitable.

They must perish or put a summary end to the disaster—a decision must be made—but how?

What a combatant—this cannon! They must check this mad monster. They must seize this flash of lightening. They must overthrow this thunder-bolt.

Boisberthelot said to La Vieuville, "Do you believe in God, chevalier?"

La Vieuville replied, "Yes. No. Sometimes."

"In a tempest?"

"Yes; and in moments like this."

"Only God can aid us here," said Boisberthelot.

All were silent—the cannon kept up its horrible fracas.

The waves beat against the ship: their blows from without responded to the strokes of the cannon.

It was like two hammers alternating.

Suddenly, into the midst of this sort of inaccessible circus, where the escaped cannon leaped and bounded, there sprang a man with an iron bar in his hand. It was the author of this catastrophe, the gunner whose culpable negligence had caused the accident —the captain of the gun. Having been the means of bringing about the misfortune, he desired to repair it. He had caught up a handspike in one fist, a tiller-rope with a slipping noose in the other, and jumped down into the gun-deck. Then a strange combat: a Titanic strife—the struggle of the gun against the gunner, a battle between matter and intelligence, a duel between the inanimate and the human.

The man was posted in an angle, the bar and rope in his two fists; backed against one of the riders, settled firmly on his legs as on two pillars of steel, livid, calm, tragic, rooted as it were in the planks, he waited.

He waited for the cannon to pass near him.

The gunner knew his piece, and it seemed to him that she must recognize her master. He had lived a long while with her. How many times he had thrust his hand between her jaws! It was his tame monster. He began to address it as he might have done his dog.

"Come!" said he. Perhaps he loved it.

He seemed to wish that it would turn toward him.

But to come toward him would be to spring upon him. Then he would be lost. How to avoid its crush? There was the question. All stared in terrified silence.

Not a breast respired freely, except, perchance, that of the old man who alone stood in the deck with the two combatants, a stern second.

He might himself be crushed by the piece. He did not stir.

Beneath them, the blind sea directed the battle.

At the instant when, accepting this awful hand-to-hand contest, the gunner approached to challenge the cannon, some chance fluctuation of the waves kept it for a moment immovable, as if suddenly stupefied.

"Come on!" the man said to it. It seemed to listen.

Suddenly it darted upon him. The gunner avoided the shock.

The struggle began. struggle unheard of. The fragile matching itself against the invulnerable. The thing of flesh attacking the brazen brute. On the one side blind force on the other a soul.

The whole passed in a half light. It was like the indistinct vision of a nightmare.

A soul—strange thing; but you would have said that the cannon had one also. A soul filled with rage and hatred. This blindness appeared to have eyes. The monster had the air of watching the man. There was one might have fancied at least cunning in this mass. It also chose its moment. It became some gigantic insect of metal, having or seeming to have the will of a demon. Sometimes the colossal grasshopper would strike the low ceiling of the gun deck, then fall back on its four wheels like a tiger upon its four claws, and dart anew on the man. He supple, agile, adroit—would glide away like a snake from the reach of these lightning-like movements. He avoided the encounters, but the blows which he escaped fell upon the vessel and continued the havoc.

An end of broken chain remained attached to the carronade. This chain had twisted itself, one could not tell how, about the screw of the breech-button. One extremity of the chain was fastened to the carriage. The other, hanging loose, whirled wildly about the gun, and added to the danger of its blows.

The screw held it like a clinched hand, and the chain, multiplying the strokes of the battering-ram by its strokes of a thong, made a fearful whirl wind about the cannon.

A whip of iron in a fist of brass. This chain complicated the battle.

Nevertheless the man fought. Sometimes, even, it was the man who attacked the cannon. He crept along the side, bar and rope in hand and the cannon had the air of understanding, and fled as if it perceived a snare. The man pursued it, formidable, fearless.

Such a duel could not last long. The gun seemed suddenly to say to itself, "Come, we must make an end;" and it paused. One felt the approach of the crisis. The cannon, as if in suspense, appeared to have, or had—because it seemed to all a sentient being—a furious premeditation. It sprang unexpectedly upon the gunner. He jumped aside, let it pass, and cried out with a laugh, "Try again!" The gun, as if in a fury, broke a carronade to larboard: then, seized anew by the invisible sling which held it, was flung to starboard toward the man, who escaped.

Three carronades gave way under the blows of the gun: then, as if blind, and no longer conscious of what it was doing, it turned its back on the man, rolled from the stern to the bow, bruising the stem and making a breach in the plankings of the prow. The gunner had taken refuge at the foot of the stairs, a few steps from the old man, who was watching.

The gunner held his handspike in rest. The cannon seemed to perceive him, and, without taking the trouble to turn itself, backed upon him with the quickness of an axe stroke. The gunner, if driven back against the side, was lost. The crew uttered a simultaneous cry.

But the old passenger, until now immovable, made a spring more rapid than all those wild whirls. He seized a bale of the false assignats, and, at the risk of being crushed, succeeded in flinging it between the wheels of the carronade. This manœuvre, decisive and dangerous, could not have been executed with more adroitness and precision by a man trained to all the exercises set down in Durosel's Manual of Sea Gunnery.

The bale had the effect of a plug. A pebble may stop a log, a free branch turn an avalanche. The carronade stumbled. The gunner, in his turn, seized this terrible chance, plunged his iron bar between the spokes of one of the hind wheels. The cannon was stopped. It staggered. The man, using the bar as a lever, rocked it to and fro. The heavy mass turned over with a clang like a falling bell, and the gunner, dripping with sweat, rushed forward headlong, and passed the slipping noose of the tiller-rope about the bronze neck of the overthrown monster. It was ended. The man had conquered. The ant had subdued the mastodon; the pigmy had taken the thunder-bolt prisoner.

The marines and sailors clapped their hands.

The whole crew hurried down with cables and chains, and in an instant the cannon was securely lashed.

The gunner saluted the passenger.

"Sir," he said to him, "you have saved my life."

The old man had resumed his impassible attitude, and did not reply.

The man had conquered, but one might say that the cannon had conquered also. Immediate shipwreck had been avoided, but the corvette was by no means saved. The dilapidation of the vessel seemed irremediable. The sides had five breaches, one of which, very large, was in the bow. Out of the thirty carronades, twenty by useless in their frames.

The carronade which had been captured and rechained was itself disabled: the screw of the breech-button was forced, and the leveling of the piece impossible in consequence. The battery was reduced to nine pieces. The hold had sprung a leak. It was necessary at once to repair damages and set the pumps to work.

The gun-deck, now that one had time to look about it, offered a terrible spectacle. The interior of a mad elephant's cage could not have been more completely dismantled.

However great the necessity that the corvette should escape observation, a still more imperious necessity presented itself—immediate safety. It had been necessary to light up the deck by lanterns placed here and there along the sides.

But during the whole time this tragic diversion had lasted the crew were so absorbed by the one question of life or death that they noticed little what was passing outside the scene of the duel. The fog had thickened; the weather had changed; the wind had driven the vessel at will; it had got out of its route, in plain sight of Jersey and Guernsey, farther to the south than it ought to have gone, and was surrounded by a troubled sea. The great waves kissed the gaping wounds of the corvette—kisses full of peril. The sea rocked her menacingly. The breeze became a gale. A squall, a tempest perhaps, threatened. It was impossible to see before one four oars' length.

While the crew were repairing summarily and in haste the ravages of the gun-deck, stopping the leaks and putting back into position the guns which had escaped the disaster, the old passenger had gone on deck.

He stood with his back against the mainmast.

No paid no attention to a proceeding which had taken place on the vessel. The Chevalier La Vieuville had drawn up the marines in line on either side of the mainmast, and at the whistle of the boatswain the sailors busy in the rigging stood upright on the yards.

Count du Boisberthelot advanced toward the passenger. Behind the captain marched a man haggard, breathless, his dress in disorder, yet wearing a satisfied look under it all. It was the gunner who had just now so opportunely shown himself a tamer of monsters, and who had got the better of the cannon.

The count made a military salute to the unknown in peasant garb, and said to him, "General, here is the man."

THE DAY.

The small pox is getting alarming in Fall River. It is to be hoped that our city authorities are prepared to meet it if it comes to us, or rather, to meet it before it fairly gets into town.

Ex-President Millard Fillmore is dead. Everybody knew it some weeks ago, but the news was sent officially by the red tape telegraph line and has just reached Fort Adams and the Torpedo Station. Hence these guns.

PROVIDENCE CONFERENCE.

The Providence conference is still in session in North Bridgewater. The attendance of ministers and laymen is unusually large. Among visitors present is a considerable delegation from Newport, as well as from other cities and towns in the conference. And yet at this writing, Friday, the incoming is not at its light as Sunday is the great day of the feast when still greater crowds will be here.

The business of the session proceeds very satisfactorily but not quite as rapidly as usual. On Wednesday the Rev. Dr. Talbot gave an account of the work in the Providence district, of which he is presiding elder, which shows a remarkable growth of the church during the past year. In his district alone between nine and ten hundred conversions are reported. Two new churches have been built and several heavy church debts have been paid off. Everywhere the societies are in harmony and peace.

The Rev. G. W. Brewster gave an account of the state of the work in Norwich, Conn., district over which he presides. It was almost, though not quite equally favorable. While Mr. Brewster was on the floor he was interrupted by the Rev. Z. S. Haynes who presented him with an elegant gold watch which had been purchased by the preachers under him, and presented as a token of regard. Mr. Brewster has been four years in charge of the district and now retires from its oversight.

Quite a spirited discussion arose over the passage of the character of the Rev. William Turkington, formerly of Middletown R. I., who last year failed to go to his appointment and remained a fourth year with the church where he was laboring. His course was censured by a vote of the conference but his character passed in view of the explanations given. It is proper to say that there was nothing that reflected upon him save this breach of discipline law.

The Rev. Dr. Brown represented the state of the work in Fall River district, of which Newport forms a part. It showed a favorable condition of things. As Dr. Brown's term of service has expired very complimentary resolutions were adopted by the clergymen who have served under him. They were read by the Rev. C. Young of Taunton.

In the afternoon of Friday the Church Extension Society held its anniversary. The attendance was very large. Chaplain McCabe, the hero of Libby prison, was the chief speaker. He is one of the most effective platform speakers in the country and never fails to awaken the greatest enthusiasm. He was on this occasion in his happiest mood. Near the conclusion of the service he was called on for one or more of his beautiful hymns which were sung amid great applause. It will be remembered that when a prisoner in Libby prison these songs saved many a poor fellow's life by awakening new courage and hope among the suffering and starving victims.

The missionary anniversary occurred in the evening. The Rev. John Lovejoy presided. The first address was by the Rev. Mr. Sawyer of Providence. He was followed by the Rev. Dr. Eddy of New York, secretary of the parent society. It was a great success. The report showed a falling off of a few hundred dollars in the collections from the churches. At the close of the speech a gentleman in the audience proposed to be one of ten to make up the deficiency. The proposition was taken up with alacrity and in a little time the whole amount was raised, making the collections about $12,000.

Between the sessions of the conference while a large number of clergymen and laymen of Rhode Island were in the vestry of the church, the news came that the General Assembly had passed the prohibitory liquor law. The Rev. B. W. Gonnt made the announcement which was received with cheers. The Rev. J. W. Willett made a few congratulatory remarks and there was quite an informal jubilee. The enthusiasm was at a high pitch and found vent in singing "Our God is marching on."

The business of the conference will probably require the continuance of the session until next Tuesday.

Soon after smoke was seen issuing from the door and the books and papers about the desk were found to be on fire, but a few pails of water soon extinguished the flames. On Thursday evening Wright went into the bank, took what money there was in the safe, amounting to some three or four thousand dollars, as near as can be learned from depositors, and left, but was subsequently arrested in Potsdam, N. A temperance meeting was held at the rooms of Union Temple of Honor last evening. The room which is too small to hold these gatherings, was crowded and even standing room could not be obtained by those who came late. Several interesting five minute speeches were made by Messrs. Kimball, being present, the five minute rule was suspended in his favor and he made a most instructive address which was listened to with great interest. At the close of the meeting, a committee was appointed to obtain a larger place where the meetings could be held. The churches were suggested and in all probability some of them will be offered during the week, as the temperance meeting would not conflict with evening services.

PALM SUNDAY.

Dear Brethren—Your attention was called this morning to the triumphal entrance of our blessed Savior into the city of Jerusalem. Hosannas were uttered by the multitude. Still the enthusiasm which had been this day manifested was somewhat checked by the absence of the expected results. If Jesus had taken what the people conceived to be the proper course, the end they deemed most expedient, now was the time for its accomplishment. It is needless to say that they were disappointed as the day wore to a close. Even the disciples shared in it: still they had a hope that he might take possession of the kingdom which only waited his acceptance. The hopes were not to be realized, for we are informed that Jesus returned in the evening to Bethany and spent the night there. Oh how many hearts at the close of that day were rendered intensely sad! How many anticipations blasted by his failing to take unto himself the office and dignity of a temporal ruler as a king! Many there were that welcomed him that morning into the sacred city with the shout "Hosanna to the Son of David! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord!" who were more eager in five days after to join in that horrid cry, "crucify Him, crucify Him."

This momentary triumph which we celebrate during this holy Lenten season, is as it were an oasis in the desolation of the trial, temptation and suffering of our blessed Redeemer. Notwithstanding this rejoicing, Palm Sunday is to be mingled with intense sadness. For we are well informed as to its result.—We are privileged to discern through all this high sounding applause, this triumphal ovation. For we behold in the back ground, three crosses erected on Calvary's awful summit and on one of these the blessed Jesus writhing in agony crucified between two thieves.

Before we proceed further we may appropriately remark that to an earnest Churchman, one who reveres the Church as the spouse of Christ and purchased by his own precious blood the whole season of Lent is one of intense interest. For what period during the whole year could be more fully spent in unusual acts of self denial and more earnest prayer and reconsecration of self to Christ than that period which we commemorate of his temptation in the wilderness by Satan; his agony and Bloody sweat, his Cross and Passion, his precious Death and Burial and glorious Resurrection.

There are some who are strangers to the Church who do not regard our holy season with the veneration we give it. Fasting and self denial has a strange meaning to them. They cannot exactly understand it. They frequently remark that the whole year should be one continual Lent. They however speak of revivals. They understand a season of revival as they term it when the Holy Spirit is supposed to exert a greater influence among the children of men. Might we not with as much truth and justice reply in the same language that the whole year should be a revival?

The Lenten period with us is a stated season devoted conjointly over the whole world by the churches of Christendom to renewed energy greater watchfulness, and earnest prayer. We believe that the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, who was sent unto us after the ascension of our blessed Redeemer is constantly with us. That one of the Holy Three is with us at all times, that he never fails to exert his influence for good, that he is ever at our side, that his power is never dormant, that he comes not in the whirlwind and tempest causing confusion, neither in the earthquake nor the fire; but he is ever in the still small voice; and in quiet, penitence and prayer, he is found in the hearts of those who will thus admit him and will there continue if we faithfully reverence and adore. Some there are that wait years, for what they term an unusual religious interest. The reason they do not enjoy it at all times in the same proportion is on account of their lethargy as pertaining to spiritual things. It is no fault of the Holy Ghost. Now the Church sets apart a time to fulfill this duty for fear some of us might neglect it to the detriment of our souls. If we individually were left to the selection of an appropriate time, to be more zealously applied than common to devotion and good works, that appropriate season would never come, or if it did it might possibly depend upon excitement; and the good results attending would be as fleeting, as the movement was sudden.

Every sincere prayer we utter, every good deed we do helps to fortify our souls and make victory over the devil easier. And our Saviour plainly tells us that there is a kind that goeth not out but by prayer and fasting. He predicted that his followers would fast at that time when the bridegroom should be taken away from them. To enable us to resist strong temptations, the sensual body must be mortified by fasting and self denial and the feeble will and wandering mind brought back to God by contemplation and prayer. This is the reason, one grand reason at least, why we keep the Lenten fast, imitating in this the example of Jesus who prayed and fasted forty days in the desert in order to prepare us against temptation, leaving us an example that we should follow his steps.

Beloved friends, we are now about to enter upon the most solemn period of the Christian year. It is most proper that we should strictly observe it, and at this season be found in the sanctuary, that we may the better meditate upon the sufferings which our blessed Saviour underwent for our sakes. We may, during this present week, trace our blessed Lord step by step until he is raised upon the torturous cross and leave him finally in the tomb. Is it not due to the great Saviour of our race, when the part of the year returns in which he endured the heavy stripes by which we are healed to pause to recur to the scenes of his sufferings, and indulge in the emotions which they are calculated to excite. That he is not insensible to such expressions of our respect, we may infer from his own institution of an ordinance for showing forth his death, till he comes. The particular time in which he suffered could hardly have needed a command for its consecration to the remembrance of him. For who can reflect, that at this time the great benefactor of the human race was making that sacrifice of himself which redeemed them from perdition, and not go to his church, to listen to the narrative of his sorrows, and bend the knee to him in gratitude and adoration. With respect to ourselves, this institution is proper to impress us with a lively memory of our Savior's sufferings.

Amidst the blandishments of pleasure, and distractions of business, the sufferings of the Son of God are too easily forgotten. His humiliation and agony, give place in our minds to those cares and pursuits which are inseparable from our existence. But unless his death be properly impressed upon our minds, it can hardly produce in us the desired effects. It is therefore useful, as it is necessary at stated times, to retire from the common occupations of life and meditate upon the acts of his Passion and the several events connected therewith. Do we not cherish in our memories, the last hours of our loved ones, and shall it not thus be with the closing acts and scenes of him who suffered for us, and can there be any time so appropriate as that solemn week when his life's blood streamed from the cruel Cross. Remember this is a week of self-denial, of strict abstinence, of earnest, fervent prayer. Therefore let us take up our cross and follow the sorrowing Jesus.

How can one that truly loves the Saviour, whose heart bleeds on account of the wrong and agony he underwent, wilfully absent himself from the services of the Church during Holy Week. No small impediment should debar you of the grace which you will undoubtedly receive by an earnest and devout participation. Can you afford to be without it when it is within your reach? Let us be found among the faithful, and mark every footprint of his rough and rugged journey, from his entrance into the garden of Olives, until you see him staggering under the weight of the ponderous Cross on which he is to suffer. And this brings us to Good Friday. The most solemn day of the year. There is in this a mournful sadness, on account of the shame and ignominy, and suffering, he endured for our sakes. May we not on Friday next hope to find you all assembled together in one place to worship and adore the dying Jesus. Also I sincerely hope that there will not be a communicant absent on this day or the festival of the resurrection. Do not I entreat you, plead business or any other vain excuse for not attending the former and fail not to be a participant of that most holy feast on that glorious Easter morning.

There is no communion season of the whole year that is fraught with so much joy and interest as this and rightly so, for it was on this day that our blessed Redeemer triumphed over his last enemy, by bursting the bonds of death and rising in triumph from the tomb; demonstrating by unmistakable evidence his divinity. However, notwithstanding all this there are some living in this Christian land, inhabitants of these Eastern states, of that rigid Puritan extraction, who deny his divinity and boldly assert that there was nothing miraculous connected with his birth; that he was born like other men, that he lived like other men and dare to say that he died like other men; that he offered no atonement for the world. Such cannot be so interested in the transactions which occurred during this holy week: but with those who believe in his perfect and all sufficient atonement it is otherwise. And we have a right to expect they will act their belief.

We have, my friends, undeniable proof of his glorious Resurrection from the dead. A thorough demonstration of his divine power and majesty, which was never disputed in the first ages of Christianity. With this testimony to the truth, the doctrine of his manhood only, falls to the ground like a foundation built upon the sand.

Therefore ye who profess he was Divine draw near with faith and humble yourselves when the time draws nigh to commemorate the most important event of his life. And if we are only faithful in our duty to the word of God and the voice of the church, we will with hearts refreshed return to our homes after partaking of the sacred banquet of his body and blood on the festival of the resurrection. A sacrament, rest assured, is not a mere form. In it we have the outward and visible: also, the inward and spiritual, hence they are aids and channels of grace. May we never willingly neglect them. As Christ gives us bread to the sustenance of our bodies, so he imparts this spiritual food to the nourishment of our souls. As we are regenerate and made his children by baptism, and receive in an especial manner grace thereby: so likewise are our souls refreshed and brought near to God by a devout and worthy reception of the dying emblems of his love.

And does not that soul do violence to itself that slights and neglects the ordinances of his love? Christ hath said "This do in remembrance of me. For unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink his blood ye have no life in you: for my flesh is meat indeed and my blood is drink indeed." You remember many left him and walked no more with him when he uttered these words. They said how can this man give us his flesh to eat? Let us not be offended. Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life. May we draw nearer to thee as we approach this sacred feast.

The object I have in view this afternoon in addressing you in so plain a manner, is to impress on your minds the duty and importance of a devout observance of the coming week: and your duty as Churchmen and Christians in all that pertains to the offices of devotion praise and prayer. Your attendance during this Lenten season upon the services I have never known to be so generally observed. Still there is room for improvement. There are some few communicants that have not been present once. Others two or three times. A number who are not communicants that have not been absent. Those that have been remiss in this duty, let them begin this week notwithstanding it may be the eleventh hour of the day. It may be equally true that it is the twelfth hour of Lent to them. Their last Lenten season, it may be. Oh, improve it well. If you can rest satisfied at a holy time like this to stay away from God's house and people, and desire not the benefit of united prayer during this week of the Savior's passover, I solemnly declare to you as God's ambassador, that you are remiss in duty, cold and indifferent to Christ and his cause, and much will have to be accomplished before you are ready to depart and meet that Saviour, and have him declare: "Well done good and faithful servant enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

My dear friends, let your minds recall the many Lenten seasons you have already past: surely your memories must bear witness that your hearts have again and again been touched. Have you not frequently resolved to die unto sin and live unto righteousness? You know and God knows those good resolutions have evaporated as the early cloud and morning dew, and you have relapsed into sin. Oh! may this precious season be different, may you rise to renewed energy, may your hearts be lifted up by your zeal and earnest prayers to Him and may you each experience that peace of God which passeth all understanding, and may his love urge you henceforth forward to faith and good works, that you may fully realize the importance, as well as the advantage, of the faithful observance of the Lenten season.

How Not to Die.

Thousands fall a prey to disease not because the maladies which afflict them are necessarily fatal, but because they lack the requisite amount of active vitality to make a valiant resistance to the enemy. It is a wise precaution to keep the body always in a state of defence—always prepared to "fend off" the germs of epidemic and other disorders, and to baffle the evil influence of damp miasma and sudden thermometrical change. There is no difficulty in doing this. It is a fact as well authenticated as that two and two make four that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is specially adapted to this purpose, and for the simple reason that its invigorating and regulating properties are superior to those of any other medicine in the world. During the twenty-five years that it has been in general use, ample opportunities have been afforded to compare its medicinal properties with those of other preparations claiming to be of a similar class, and the result has been its adoption by the American people as the standard tonic of the age, its introduction into every civilized portion of the western hemisphere, and the annual sale which dwarfs into insignificance the demand for all its would-be competitors.

The record upon which its popularity rests is a unique by in medicinal history, for it includes almost unlimited variety of human ailments and disabilities. In fact, no other remedy possesses such a variety of hygienic virtues and it is to these characteristics that it owes its prestige as a household medicine.

It is no exaggeration to say that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the most faithful ally of nature, in her struggles with weakness and disease, that medical botany and honest chemistry has yet given to the world.

Astral Oil.

PRATT'S ASTRAL OIL.

WHAT IS IT? Astral Oil is a derivative of petroleum, produced by a new and improved process of manufacture, which gives it all the good, without any of the objectionable qualities of ordinary refined kerosene. Explosion is guarded against, and families can burn ASTRAL OIL with the same confidence as they can gas.

ITS QUALITIES—It is perfectly pure, containing no substance or chemicals. It gives a clear, uniform and beautiful light, unexcelled even by gas. It is free from objectionable odors. It burns in the ordinary kerosene lamps. It is always uniform in quality.

ITS SAFETY—The Astral Oil may be relied upon as non-explosive and in every way perfectly safe to use. If, while burning, a lamp be upset and broken, the contents will not readily ignite or take fire. It is the safest oil that can be made. Persons once using it will have no other. For sale by dealers generally. m&f2

Newport Daily News.

MONDAY, MARCH, 30, 1874.

GENERAL NEWS.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Corruption of the District Legislature.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 29.—The members of the district legislature to whom a prominent contractor testified that he had offered $3000, and paid $1900, for securing a contract, were both democrats. Culver being a member of the house of delegates, and Gulick a member of the council and a presidental appointee.

Sanborn's Evasion of the Subpoena.

The officers of the House, acting under direction of the ways and means committee, were unsuccessful in their effort to serve a subpoena upon Sanborn on Friday last, as he left the city soon after noon without waiting to ascertain the decision of the committee upon his request to defer examining him until after the trial in Brooklyn. The officers visited his hotel in time to find him, but he appears to have carefully kept out of their way. The subpoena will be served, however, in time to bring him here as soon as the trial in Brooklyn is concluded.

The Natural Sequel of the Boston Custom House Scandal.

It has come to be known in Washington that the Butler men are looking carefully over the whole field of custom appointments in Massachusetts, with the view of removing all, so far as possible, who are either lukewarm toward, or inimical to General Butler. In many cases no direct recommendations for such removal have been received, but enough of those who have been threatened have made their cases known here, to show that no effort will be spared by the Butler faction to obtain complete control of the forces of the custom house, in view of the next election. There are good reasons to doubt whether this movement will receive the cordial support here necessary to its success.

The Features of the Geneva Award Distribution Bill.

The house judiciary committee yesterday continued the consideration of the Geneva award bill, and while the text of the bill was not fully determined upon, it was decided that it should embrace the following features: No payment to insurance companies; the payment of the difference between the insurance and the real value of the cargo wherever the insurance was less than the value, and the payment of special premiums on account of war risks.

Critical Condition of Admiral Porter's Health.

Admiral Porter has suffered a relapse, and his condition this morning is regarded as very critical by his friends.

FROM NEW YORK.

The Coal Mine Fire in Pennsylvania. Loss over $500,000.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The Herald correspondent writes that the fire in the Empire mine, near Wilkesbarre, Pa., has cost the company $110,000, spent in endeavoring to quench the flames, and $430,000 in coal, which but for the fire the miners would have taken from the earth.

Forest Fires in Long Island and in New Jersey—Three Fatalities Reported.

The woods between Washington, South River and South Amboy, New Jersey, have been burning furiously several days. Travel between the places is almost impossible at times, but it is believed the fire can be kept under control.

A spark from a locomotive on Friday evening set fire to brush in the woods near Farmingdale, L. I., and several hundred acres were burned over during the night. The village of Farmingdale was barely saved from the flames and a large number of cattle were burned. It is reported that two men and a boy were burned to death.

Fatal Railroad Accident.

A collision of two freight trains on the Pennsylvania Railroad in Jersey City occurred last evening, in consequence of the negligence of the telegraphic signal man. J. Day, fireman was crushed to death, and a brakeman was thrown under the cars, his skull being crushed and his arm cut off. Conductor Keyes was fatally, and Engineer Metz slightly scalded. Both locomotives were badly smashed and several cars injured. The signal man is under arrest to await the result of the inquest.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ERIE STRIKE.

Warlike Aspect of the Situation.

SUSQUEHANNA, Pa., March 29.—Vice President Clark of the Erie Company arrived here at three o'clock A. M., and five hundred soldiers under General Osborne, with a section of a light battery, arrived before noon. About noon Vice President Clark had a conference with a committee of the strikers, and submitted a proposition to them for acceptance. This was done to avoid a collision with the troops.

The strikers refused to consider the propositions of the company until tomorrow morning. They decided to allow passenger trains to be resumed at once, but refuse to allow freight to be moved. At 7: 30 P. M. another detachment of seventy five soldiers arrived here.

The Colima.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29.—Steamship Arizona, with the Colima in tow, passed between Santa Rosa and Santa Cruz island, on the southern coast of California, today.

The American Trade Mark Treaty Signed.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 28.—The Hon. Marshall Jewell today signed the declaration respecting trade marks. It gives to American manufacturers an equal right with those of Russia, thus completely protecting the interests of Americans. This is the first treaty signed in both the Russian and English languages.

The Providence Conference.

On Saturday morning seven young men were received on probation in the conference: A. W. Scavey, James Tregaskis, J. Oldham, W. F. Steel, E. A. Boyden, R. W. C. Farnsworth and J. G. Gammons. The committee on freedmen's aid reported, and the Rev. Dr. Rutledge, agent of the society, spoke on its work. The conference pledged its sympathy and support in this work. The committee on worn out preachers reported that $1000 would be necessary to meet their claims for the coming year.

Invitations were presented to hold the next session of the conference at Pleasant street, New Bedford and at Centenary church, Provincetown, and Pleasant street was selected. Dr. Wheden, in behalf of the ministers of Providence district, presented the Rev. Dr. J. M. Talbot, presiding elder, now retiring from that office, with a cane, as an expression of their esteem and love. Dr. Talbot, in response, said: "I thank you; I love you as much as you do me." In the afternoon, the Sunday School Union meeting was held. The Rev. S. Leader presided and addresses were made by the Rev. Messrs. S. O. Benton, E. D. Hall and C. Young.

The Great University Boat Race.

LONDON, March 28.—12:30 P. M.—The University boat race was won by the Cambridge crew by two lengths.

NEW YORK ITEMS.

It is said that Edward Stephenson will be the mayor's next nominee for the vacant police commissionership.

The health of Bishop Cummins, of the Reformed Episcopal church, is seriously impaired, and he is compelled to refrain from all exertion and leave the city.

The distribution of moieties in the Wood, ruff and Robinson case took place Friday. Informer Jayne getting $12,500, and the collector, naval officer and surveyor getting $4000 each.

The counsel for Wm. M. Tweed Friday applied for a mandamus to compel Judge Davis to insert certain exceptions now pending, and Judge Daniels and Westbrook granted an order to show cause why such mandamus should not issue, argument to be heard the 23 of April.

WASHINGTON ITEMS.

The sub-committee of the committee on ways and means has reported in favor of imposing a tax of ten cents per pint on all artificial or imitation sparkling wines.

A fire Friday night destroyed two frame dwellings in the southern part of the city, occupied by colored families. Two children of Myra Campbell, asleep in the upper story, were burned to death.

The Senate committee on public lands has voted to recommend the passage of a bill for the payment to the states of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois of two per cent on the proceeds of the sale of public lands within their boundaries.

The House committee on Indian affairs has agreed to report a bill enlarging the statutes of 1864 and 1862 so as to prohibit the sale of ardent spirits by one Indian to another. The necessity of this bill arises from the practice of Indians of the British provinces who frequently cross the line and sell liquor to Indians in the United States.

The delegation of Osage Indians had an interview Friday with the Secretary of the Interior and Commissioner Smith. The Indians are very anxious to have the large amount of money held in trust for them divided per capita, and given over entirely to their own use. The recommendation of Secretary Delano is that it be used only for the purpose of their thorough civilization and moral and physical welfare. The council today determined nothing, the secretary explaining his views to the Indians, who responded, arguing in favor of the plan of giving the fund into their own hands. It is not in the least probable this will be done.

Since the beginning of the temperance crusade a great many ladies have been admitted to the bar.

It is feared the women's crusade will not leave swallows enough in some Western cities to make a Spring.

Emerson says: "The way to make the world better is by reforming number one, then there is surely one less villain in the world."

A fop, in company, wanting his servant, called out, "Where's that blockhead of mine?" "On your shoulders, sir," said a lady.

The demon of dulness which is often allowed to reign at home has more to do with driving young men into vicious company than the attractions of vice itself.

Beecher cursorily remarked that squeaking boots were one of the notable burdens of existence, while listening to some in Connecticut recently.

The latest thing out in ladies' umbrellas, is a sword handle. Are the men of this nation ever going to rise and defend themselves?—[Brooklyn Argus.

"Latter-day Saints" is what the Commercial Advertiser calls the Washington ring. But why "saints"? Is it because they believe in a Profit?—[Boston Advertiser.

A college professor walking with an Episcopal clergyman, met one of the "state force." Quoth the professor, "Is that a state policeman?" "No," replied the minister, "that is the constable de Bourbon."

A beau in Irisburg, Vermont, took his girl out for a ride. The sleigh tipped over and broke her leg; then the beau sent her home on a wood sleigh that chanced to come along and continued his ride alone.

In several Western cities associations have been formed, the members of which pledge themselves not to pay for any other man's drink and not to drink at any other man's expense. "Every man skin his own eel."

"Well, Sambo, what's yer up to nowadays?" "O, I is a carp'ner and j'iner," "Ho! I guess yer is. What department do you perform?" "What department? Why, I does the circular work." "What's dat?" "Why, I turns de grindstone—g'way."

Not long ago a clergyman in a country church not a thousand miles from Augusta, Ga., after finishing his sermon and announcing a temperance meeting, said he had some cotton seed for sale, of a new variety, which could be had at—at only one dollar per bag.

"They are rejoicing in new potatoes in Texas," writes a brilliant paragraphist. Of course, potatoes grow to a great size in Texas, but only a very small man could rejoice in one of them with any comfort.—[Louisville Courier Journal.

"Patience is always crowned with success. This rule is without an exception. It may not be a splendid success, but patience never takes anything in hand that it does not succeed with in some form." So writes a recent essayist. But how about hens setting on porcelain eggs?—[Boston Transcript.

Austria is the first country to adopt measures for the introduction of cremation as a mode of disposing of the bodies of the dead. Vienna has adopted a proposal to establish in the cemetery the necessary apparatus for burning the bodies, the use of which will be optional and open to all.

The Cincinnati Times comments on two great evils of the present day—intoxication and costly funerals—as follows: "Think of it! Ninety millions of dollars thrown away every year for drinks! It is shameful for men to keep drinking. In this connection, also, we may mention that it costs $200,000,000 a year for funerals, and that it's shameful to keep dying. Think of all the poor orphans that $200,000,000 would support."

There is an old darkey in Maryland who lately voted for local option, as he understood it, but not as the public generally understood it. The story (a true one) runs thus: At a recent election a friend asked the old man how he was going to vote. "Oh," he replied, "the Republican ticket." "But how are you going to vote on local option?" The darky, looking up, asked, "What's dat?" "Why, local option is putting down liquor." "Lors a massy!" said the darky, "of course I vote for local option; I votes to put down liquor to the old price, fib-penny-bit a pint."

Four Yale students a few nights ago climbed to the old college clock by means of the lightning rod and a broken window. They cut the bell-rope after they had got into the tower and binding it around one of their number let him down on the outside to the clock's face so that he could get the hands. The hands on both sides were broken off and carried away. The boys also took away some of the works of the clock for private distribution.

A number of highly respectable and strictly moral young gentlemen of St. Louis have organized an association to be known as the "Gallants' Club," the object of which is to furnish young ladies who have no regular beau an escort to church, concerts, lectures and places of amusement. All members have to undergo a rigid examination as to character, etc., before they are admitted, and they obligate themselves to obey all the orders of the executive committee. Any lady wishing an escort has only to apply to the president of the society, naming the evening, and a young man is detailed for the purpose. As soon as a young man becomes engaged he must withdraw from the organization.

Newport Daily News.

MONDAY, MARCH, 30, 1874.

eral, taking into consideration what this man has done, do you not think there is something for his commanders to do ?"

"I think there is," said the old man.

"Be good enough to give the orders," returned Boisberthelot.

"It is for you to give them. You are the captain."

"But you are the general," answered Boisberthelot.

The old man looked at the gunner. "Approach," said he.

The gunner moved forward a step. The old man turned toward Count du Boisberthelot, detached the cross of Saint Louis from the captain's uniform, and fastened it on the jacket of the gunner.

"Hurrah!" cried the sailors.

The marines presented arms. The old passenger pointing with his finger toward the bewildered gunner, added, "Now let that man be shot."

Stupor succeeded the applause.

Then, in the midst of a silence like that of the tomb, the old man raised his voice. He said:

"A negligence has endangered this ship. At this moment she is perhaps lost. To be at sea is to face the enemy. A vessel at open sea is an army which gives battle. The tempest conceals, but does not absent itself. The whole sea is an ambuscade. Death is the penalty of any fault committed in the face of the enemy. No fault is reparable. Courage ought to be rewarded, and negligence punished."

These words fell one after the other slowly, solemnly, with a sort of inexorable measure, like the blows of an axe upon an oak.

And the old man, turning to the soldiers, added, "Do your duty."

The man upon whose breast shone the cross of Saint Louis bowed his head.

At a sign from Count du Boisberthelot two sailors descended between decks, then returned, bringing the hammock winding sheet. The ship's chaplain, who since the time of sailing had been at prayer in the officers' quarters, accompanied the two sailors; a sergeant detached from the line twelve marines, whom he arranged in two ranks, six by six; the gunner, without uttering a word, placed himself between the two files. The chaplain, crucifix in hand, advanced and stood near him.

"March !" said the sergeant.

The platoon moved with slow steps toward the bow. Two sailors who carried the shroud followed.

A gloomy silence fell upon the corvette. A hurricane moaned in the distance.

A few instants later there was a flash; a report followed, echoing among the shadows; then all was silent; then came the thud of a body falling into the sea.

The old passenger still leaned back against the mainmast with folded arms, thinking silently.

Boisberthelot pointed toward him with the forefinger of his left hand, and said in a low voice to La Vieuville,

"The Vendée has found a head !"

GREASING OF AXLES.—Many a wheel is ruined by oiling too plentifully. A well made wheel will endure constant wear from ten to twenty years, if care is taken to use the right kind and proper amount of oil ; but if the matter is not attended to the wheel will be used up in five or six years, or it may be sooner. Lard should never be used on a wagon, for it will penetrate the hub and work its way around the tendons of the spokes and spoil the wheels. Castor oil is a good material for use on an iron axle; just oil enough should be applied to a spindle to give it a light coating. This is better than more, for the surplus put on will work out at the ends, and be forced by the shoulders and nut into the hub around the outside of the boxes. To oil the axle-tree, first wipe the spindles clean with a cloth wet with turpentine, if it won't wipe without it. On a buggy or carriage, wipe and clean off the back and front ends and then apply a very small quantity of castor oil, or more especially prepared lubricator, near the shoulder's point.

PROFITS OF SHEEP HUSBANDRY.—It certainly is profitable to keep sheep on a farm if rightly managed even though the price of wool is low. They are scavengers on a farm—death to all weeds and shrubs that are an annoyance to the tidy farmer. Besides, the spring lambs, if a careful selection of breeds is made, will be found profitable to sell, especially the males in the market. Americans are eating more and more mutton yearly. The object of the shepherd should be to adapt his sheep husbandry to the wants of the market nearest him—grow the kind of wool that sells the best; or if the carcass is more in demand, grow the sheep which make the most and best meat in the shortest time, always taking into account hardiness and easiness of keep.

PATENT

PARABOLA SPECTACLES.

Constructed in accordance with the Philosophy of Nature.

ADMIRABLY ADAPTED TO THE ORGAN OF SIGHT, AND AFFORDING ALTOGETHER THE BEST ARTIFICIAL

Help to the Human Vision.

The Parabola Glasses can be used for the greatest length of time, either by day or night, with perfect ease, (when selected to suit the state of the eye,) and never cause that giddiness of the head, or unpleasant sensation to the eyes that many experience from using the common kind, but tend to strengthen and improve the sight.

[From the Rev. Thomas Potter, Norwich Conn.]

Having used a pair of the Parabola Spectacles, I am fully persuaded of their superiority over every other kind, and am confident that the best recommendations are impartial trials. THOMAS POTTER.

[From the Hon. Isaac Hill, late Governor of New Hampshire.]

I have used the Parabola Spectacles for the last three years; and with eyes prematurely injured by severe catarrh for more than forty years, I find them unsurpassed, especially in night reading. ISAAC HILL.

[From M. G. Kerr, M. D., Norristown, Pa.]

I do most willingly bear my testimony in favor of the superiority of the Patent Parabola over all other kinds of Spectacles. They are constructed upon the best established and understood principles of Optics, and their adaptation to the human Eye in its different conditions of vision is so perfect as to render sight easy without effort. In my opinion, none others should be used, since the Eyes once used to these do not seem to grow old, and by having a focus at any point of the surface they appear to restore the eyes to their youthful energy. M. G. KERR, M. D.

[From Isaac Heister, M. D., Reading, Pa.]

I have for several years worn the Patent Parabola Spectacles, and have found them decidedly superior to the Spectacle glasses heretofore in use.

ISAAC HEISTER, M. D.

Should the focus of these Glasses, after making trial of them, be found not adapted to the sight, purchasers are particularly requested to have them changed until suited.
